The Elections.

[From the Philadelphia Bulletin, Republican.]

It is likely that the readers of the later ditions of to-day's issue of this paper will have some definite information respecting the results of the elections held yesterday in the West. We trust that the news may be more grateful than the promise at this writing, when there seems to be nothing to expect but a small Republican majority in Ohio with a gain of a few congressmen, small Democratic majority in Indiana, and a decisive victory for the Democrats in West Virginia. We can find no reason for rejoicing in such a result, and even if the Republicans of Indiana have elected their Governor by a trifling ma-flung their best men, and in which they expended their mightiest energies, the Republicans, with excellent candidates, the prestige of former success, in Ohio at least, and the help that has come from the ominous position of the solid South, have saved themselves from defeat by a chance so narrow that it can hardly be regarded without a shudder. If there are any members of the party who can find in such a success an inspiration to jubilation and to certain confidence in the future they possess a capacity for being jolly under rather scrious conditions, which is pleasant, even if it is not a sign of the presence of solid

It is not at all worth while to try to hide, under the best promise that is now made, the fact that the only hope the Republican party has of victory in November lies in the performance of the hardest kind of hard work during the month that now remains of the campaign. Ohio ought to have rolled up a vast majority for the ticket nominated by the party which has made the honor conferred upon the first citizen of Ohio, are made more doubtful than ever and the strong probability that all of the northern States which have wavered between the two parties in the past will help such a case there is but one thing to do.

The campaign must be reopened with new

EFFECT OF THE ELECTIONS IN WALL

STREET.-New York, October 11.-There were three things to set gold back this the probable election of a Democratic Presiwas not assured, but the indications were result upon gold of a Democratic success in November. On the one hand it is conended that Mr. Tilden's election will result in such a sharp cutting down of expenses and return of prosperity to the southern States that the credit of the Government will rise at once, and gold fall in propor-that a Democratic triumph means "repudiation" and a rise in gold to points that have not been known for years. The majority appears to be decidedly with the former—that is, in favor of a better credit, a more prosperous country at large, and lower gold, as a result of Mr. Tilden's election. So far as the gold-room is concerned, this is shown this morning; for the returns from Ohio and Indiana thus far are accepted in the room as very encouraging for Democratic success in those States—far more than was anticipated yesterday—and yet gold has not only not advanced, but is less firm than vesterday. The Democrats are in good

> Woman's Love. HOW A BEAUTIFUL GIRL WAS BEWITCHED BY . GAY OUTLAW.

[From the Omaha Herald.] There is a morbid sentiment in society that in a kind of an abstract manner glorifies a great criminal, and he who can boast of "one virtue and a thousand crimes" has a hold upon the memory of the public that cannot easily be shaken off. In like manner the plebeian boor who burned the Temple of Diana was more famous than the royal architect who reared it. An instance in point jority, the party ouside of the State need not was the marriage in Council Bluffs yesshout very loudly over the triumph. At the terday of "Sandy" alias George Melville, whose swindling games and greater crimes, very best the hard fact will be that after a desperate contest, into which both parties and his frequent marvellous escapes from death by bullet and halter, have made him famous throughout the entire West. Bewitched by the strange fatalities that have always followed the man, discovering some good points that gleamed out of his dark career of crime, and admiring in him those very qualities that have made him an outcast in society, a woman has followed him, often with her presence and always with her love, and yesterday she sealed the compact existing between them by marrying him under most humiliating circumstances.

To those who have not the prior knowledge of him, Sandy will be remembered by the people of this community by his attempt, in connection with Clinton, to swindle an old man by selling him a lot of spurious gold coins in exchange for greenbacks. It will be remembered that the men were both arrested, and were tried before the United States commissioner at Council Bluffs, and "Sandy" sentenced to five years' imprisonment in the Iowa penitentiary. While awaiting trial, or rather while being conducted to the Justice's Court for the preliminary examination, Sandy atits popular Governor its choice for the presidency. Anything less than such a tempted to escape from the officer in two difot so surely Republican and which are the officer; in the latter case being wounded badly that it was reported that he without the direct inducement offered by could not recover. As these troubles collected around Sandy, the love of the woman for November. We have got to face the certainty of a South that is solid for Tilden who has at last married him grew the stronger, and she haunted the jail like a spectre; finally gaining the permission of the officer, she entered and nursed him through the hours when his life was dethe solid South to elect its candidates. In spaired of, and at last when the stern decree of the law interposed its edict and declared that they should be separated by the stronger, firmer bars of the State penitentiary, the woman sought and obtained the privilege of the officers to marry him before he was taken from her. The necessary arrangements were made, and the two strangely-matched beings were married in the jail, the ceremony being performed by a justice of the peace. The witnesses were the prisoners, who were ordered to remain at the rear end of the hall, and a few persons who were perterday. Opinions, however, differ as to the mitted to look inside through the grates of and shows what a woman will do for the man she loves. There was Sandy alias Melville, or as she claims, Melody, that being the name under which she was married, just ready to be shackled preparatory to starting for Fort Madison, where he is to serve a term of five years' imprisonment. There was a woman, young, and of rather attractive appearance, clinging to a criminal, willing and anxious to bear his name and share with him all the obloquy attached thereto. But then such is woman's nature, and such has it always been from the time of Eve. As they stood there assuming the obligations of the marriage vow the thought was well defined in each mind how differently it would have been had the relation of the party been reversed, and the woman the criminal instead of the man. The chances are in a case of that kind that the man, even if he had been the cause of committing the crime, would have deserted her in the last extremity, and left her to bear her disgrace alone, and probably have felt a secret joy that he was able to place the blame all on her. But, then, man can't be blamed; his old forefather Adam set him the example years ago.

DIFFICULTIES.—[Cape Vincent correspondence of the St. Louis Republican.]—In the bay, just below town, Judge Emerson and his wife, of Ironton, Missouri, were out in a very small boat trolling. With two hundred to three hundred feet of line out and wound around his hand, and while on his feet adjusting a seat, a terrible surge on his line threw him off his balance and into the St. Lawrence. He held fast with only one foot inside the little boat, with head and coming victory. "Now for November," it arms stretched out at full length in the water toward the fish.
